

I realize that company want to sell their products but if I really want the product on TV, the Computer or in Stores, I'll go buy it. I don't need someone to call me and remind me that the product is available nor do I want someone to call and ask for money I have enough phone calls from the people I actually owe money to. People work so many hours that the time they have at home is precious. It is evident from the amount people who registered for the Do Not Call List that consumers just are not interested in phone sales.
